Ere time had marked the coursing hours, Or spanned the fleeting days; Eternity then ruled alone, Its light, the only rays. Then from the bright angelic throng, The swelling accents came, As high above, their anthems rose, -- Lord! Hallowed be Thy name. When as the years of time s swift tide, Roll fleetingly away, Empires are shaken to their base, And bow to time s stern sway. When ruling dynasties shall fail, And thrones shall tottering fall, And Error s long wrought systems crushed, Lie dead beneath their pall. When kingdoms, powers, and lofty states, Shall bow to one great King, Uniting with a loving will, His praise and power to sing. When in that bright millennial day, Our God shall reign alone, All to His sovereignty shall bow, And all His kingdom own. Then through this earth, renewed and pure, Shall sound Our Father s name, By myriad upon myriad hosts, -- Lord! Hallowed be Thy name. Still on--when even time shall fail, And days, and months, and years, Lost in eternity s deep tide, With all their joys and fears. When suns shall fade, and moons shall lose, Their calm and peaceful light, When new eternal day shall dawn, Without one cloud of night. When we in bodies, holy, pure, Enter our heavenly home, In golden streets, by shady trees, By pearly streams to roam. Then, by the failing breath of time, The song shall be the same, Its last...
