Unfavorable weather obtained during the month of February, both temperature and precipitation being deficient, and at the end of the month the general condition of wheat was unpromising. Some fields were reported to be badly damaged and others winterkilled. Much damp, soft corn remained in hand. The characteristic of March was the heavy precipitation occurring in the southern district the latter part of the month, the measurements assuming torrential proportions at many places. At the end of the month the flood situation had become dangerous, and general inundation ensued in the lowlands. Wheat and rye showed marked improvement, and at the end of the month the outlook was generally promising. The season was backward, the soil being too wet for spring plowing. A few fields had been sown with oats, but sowing had been delayed generally on account of rains. The...
