I am sorry to say that my dear wife is still such a sufferer from her accident that we must be detained here several weeks longer. I must, therefore, forego the pleasure of being with you on the 24th instant. If you can do no better you may eke out my little speech by reading here and there from the nev edition of my brochure on Disarmament, a copy of which I send you herewith. Your faithful friend, George Dana Boardman. K. Burt Beckwith wrote: Harvard University, Cambridge, November 22, 1898. You were very kind to invite me to meet with you on this anniversary, and I should much like to be with you, for I very strongly sympathize with your work. Especially am I interested in the more specific part, the popular education movement, which I believe to be one of the most important branches, and for that work at Mystic I see a successful issue, for these reasons: First, You have a remarkably favorable location, beautiful in itself and happily situated midway between Boston and New York. Secondly, You can secure the lecturers on especially favorable terms by cooperation with Greenacre. Thirdly, The people are calling for just this sort of instruction. Especially is this true at the present time. Fourthly, No enterprise could possibly fail under...
